Profile

Having facts means having power. Careful preparation and accurate presentation renders effective legal products that protect our clients. Larry is our fact-finder, our detailer-the supportive resource and knowledge base for our team when addressing administrative law issues, including legislative drafting as well as privacy and information protection.

Formerly a key member of our litigation group, Larry has transitioned his practice to contribute to our firm and the welfare of our clients on particular projects, providing his expertise and insight as an in-house resource. He remains fully available to our lawyers and students for consultation, mentoring and training, passing along his knowledge and experience to the next generation.

With a background in legislative drafting, Larry has a particular interest in legislation, both drafting and interpretation. Having been involved since the introduction of BC's personal information protection regime and Canada's CASL regime, Larry is highly experienced in the field of information and privacy protection. This experience gives him the ability to identify issues and provide solutions on which we rely for our clients.

The enduring benefit of Larry's years of practice is that we are able to trust his judgement, expertise and integrity as a support for serving our clients. We appreciate Larry as an expert in privacy and personal information legislation and rely on his knowledge for helping our clients face challenges, develop protocols and capitalize on opportunities in the privacy realm.
