"202 pairs of jeans. That's what I saw walking into a deceased client's home in search of a missing will. In anticipation of starting my summer articling experience at Clark Wilson, I never expected to be so hands-on with my legal work, yet it was a welcomed learning experience. I spent an entire afternoon with a partner and his legal assistant scouring the deceased's house in hopes of finding the will so the estate could be probated according to the final wishes. It was definitely one of the more interesting (and surprising) afternoon projects I received all summer!"
