Profile

As our Head of Human Resources, Dawn brings over two decades of HR leadership experience across both the UK and Canada, spanning industries such as professional services, finance, and non-profit. Her international perspective and multifaceted background have equipped her with a deep understanding of what it takes to build resilient, inclusive, and people-first workplace cultures.

Dawn's leadership style is grounded in empathy, curiosity, and authenticity. She believes in co-creating culture—not dictating it—and sees her role as a facilitator who brings people together to shape meaningful and collaborative environments. Her open and transparent approach invites innovation and connection, fostering a workplace where individuals feel seen, heard, and empowered to grow.

At Clark Wilson, Dawn is excited to blend strategic vision with human insight—partnering with leaders and teams to align people strategies with business goals. Her focus includes attracting and retaining top talent, supporting professional development, and embedding a culture of belonging and continuous learning across the firm.

With a strong belief that when people thrive, organizations thrive, Dawn champions initiatives that put people at the centre of success. She's also a firm believer that work should be fulfilling, supportive, and yes—fun. Whether mentoring a new team member, celebrating a win, or introducing new ways of working, Dawn approaches her role with care and intention.
